crowd the labor market, which is already full. The importation of these poor colored people for political purposes is a crime, for which the republican party will undoubtedly suffer at the polls. It is a crime against the immigrants themselves, who will be kept alive until after election and then will be left by the republicans to shift for themselves—to starve if necessary. The republicans care no more for the negroes than do the democrats, except in so far as their votes may be of use.

SHERMAN, BLAINE, GARFIELD and other radical leaders have repeatedly stated that a Republican dare not make political speeches in the south. Mr. SHERMAN has just been invited by the republican central committee of Louisiana to visit that state and engage in the campaign, but declines on the ground that public business demands his attention, although public business did not keep him from New York, Maine and Ohio. The fact is that Mr. SHERMAN don't want to go to Louisiana. He knows he would be treated well, and would speak from one end of the state to the other without any interference. That would disprove his past utterances, and would be a bad thing for the radical party. Besides this, he wants Louisiana to go democratic. A "solid south" constitutes the radical stock in trade, and if the radicals should happen to carry one or two of the southern states, the bloody shirt could no longer be waved with any advantage.

We laid before our readers yesterday some of the most interesting portions of Secretary SHERMAN's annual report. The portions printed comprise the full statement of receipts and expenditures, the estimates of revenue and expenditures for the current and succeeding fiscal year, an account of the resumption of specie payments, a full history of the refunding operations of the treasury, and a discussion of the national banking system. Among the most important recommendations made by the secretary are the reduction of the greenbacks outstanding to $300,000,000; the repeal of the legal tender act; a cessation in the coinage of silver dollars; the imposition of a small duty on tea and coffee, and the repeal of that provision of the navigation laws which forbids the admission to American registry of foreign built vessels. The report is the most important public document of the year, and should be carefully read by every person who is interested in the finances and business of the country, especially the portion we printed yesterday, which are of the most general interest. We shall discuss in future issues some of the suggestions made by Secretary SHERMAN, few of which we predict will meet with much favor, either from congress or the public.

STATE POLITICS.

Heilman, in his letter declining to run for governor, says he is for Gen. Shackelford for the nomination.

Heilman, in his letter declining to run for governor says he is for Gen. Shackelford for the nomination.

The Rockport Gazette wants Hendricks for president, Hampton for vice president and Gray for governor.

The Michigan City Dispatch says: Thomas Francis Bayard continues to grow in popularity, and in the estimation of the American people in fact, his boom is expanding.

The Rockport Gazette says: Seymour and Pendleton are talked of for the presidential nomination next year. He has had his day in the political court years ago.

The Michigan City Dispatch says: Hon. William M. English is prominently mentioned as a suitable person for chairman of the state central committee. He would make a good one.

The Angola Herald is also in error.

It says: Hon. William Fleming has been elected chairman of the democratic state central committee, a position for which he has acquired a reputation as a political organizer eminently fits him.

Speaking of our Uncle Sammy Tilden the Columbia City Post says: The Post does hope he will be an "important factor" to the extent of aiding and assisting with all his power in achieving democratic victory in 1880. He ought to be willing to follow if he can't lead.

The Huntington Democrat says: Some of our democratic exchanges mention the name of ex-Senator R. C. Bell, of Indiana, as a suitable candidate for lieutenant-governor. He is a gentleman and possesses plenty of ability, but we opine, has no desire in that direction.

The Huntington Herald (rep.) asks: What assurance have the so-called democracy that Hendricks can carry Indiana as a presidential candidate in 1880? He has failed in the past, under more favorable circumstances than are likely to obtain in the future, and he is sure to fail in 1880.

Indianapolis News: A communication, dated from this city, and published in the Indianapolis News, dated last week, in which it was stated that the republican party had decided to nominate Seymour as its presidential candidate in 1880. It is stated that with New York and Indiana the democracy will triumph in 1880. But the old ticket is impossible because of Hendricks' refusal. To put Hendricks at the head would be such a slap at Tilden and his lukewarmness would lose New York. To nominate Tilden and somebody else would be to endanger Indiana by his lukewarmness. Hendricks and his friends are assumed to be acceptable to western democrats, and therefore for harmony both in New York and Indiana "English and Seymour" suggested. There appears to be some force of party logic in this.

THE INDIANAPOLIS SENTINEL issues the subjoined proclamation:

Indiana has but one candidate to place before the next democratic national convention for president. Her democracy is not divided, either upon men or upon measures. It is a unit for Thomas Hendricks and for the principles of the democratic party. She has no other candidate within her borders—men whom the democracy delight to honor—but for president of the United States she has but a single name to present. We hope our political friends elsewhere will believe us when we say that upon this subject our democracy is as united as upon any other. We can make democratic success assured in Indiana, and that man we have named. It should be remembered that we had not a majority of the votes of Indiana in 1876 nor in 1878, and, therefore, that it will not be safe to count on Indiana in 1880 unless we have a candidate acceptable to our people. Mr. Hendricks is the man our people want to lead them, and it will be an act, both of policy and of wisdom, to nominate him. With him as a candidate we can carry Indiana; without him the race at best would be a mere struggle for position.

We have nothing to say as to who would be the proper man for New York to select as Mr. Hendricks' associate; we are willing to leave that choice to the majority of that state, only hoping it will be some one who can unite the distracted democracy of that state. If it be not done, all will be lost. Let us hope that a state which has produced a Wright and a Mary and which now has within her borders a Seymour, a Tilden, and a Potter, will not be forced to wait until the hour comes to act, but will select the man as the fit person to place on the ticket with Mr. Hendricks. Should this be done, we can not doubt that the choice of Indiana and New York will be confirmed and ratified by the democracy of the country when it meets in national convention, and after that by the people at the polls. In such an event, we feel warranted in saying the successful candidates will be inaugurated president and vice president of the United States, for the tactics so successfully played in 1876 can not be repeated in 1880.

THE NEW RECTOR.

The Rev. W. N. Webbe Gets a Good Send Off at Evansville.

What he says in an interview about Fort Wayne and Her People.

Rev. W. N. Webbe, of Evansville, who was in the city last week, has accepted the rectorship of Trinity church. The Evansville Journal speaking of it says:

Rev. W. N. Webbe, Rector of St. Paul's church, has returned from Fort Wayne, where he has accepted the Rectorship of Trinity church. Mr. Webbe has been rector of St. Paul's church for six years and has accomplished a great work in the congregation. Apart from his ability in the pulpit he has found many admirers of his social qualities and his liberality of thought and ideas. There are few young men in the ministry who have accomplished more or whose future is more promising.

A reporter of the Journal called on Mr. Webbe yesterday, to ascertain the truth of the reports of his leaving from his own lips.

"Yes," he said, "I have concluded to accept the call to Fort Wayne. It was so cordial and complimentary and the people I met there were so urgent that I could not say 'no.'"

"What kind of a congregation will you have?" asked the reporter.

"It is a large and flourishing congregation. They have a fine church building, and I can see possibilities of great work in the place. It is a fine field for a young man, and I shall enter upon the duties of the charge with the intention to do my best."

"What do you think of Fort Wayne?" was the next question.

"It is a beautiful place, having 8,000 or 9,000 inhabitants less than Evansville. The people are very intelligent, and the social element is attractive. There are many people of Eastern origin in the city, and the social circles are elevated and refined."

"You have a very pleasant prospect then?"

"Yes, I have very pleasant anticipations, but I will leave Evansville with sincere regret. I have had pleasant relations here, and my people have been very cordial."

Mr. Webbe's departure will be greatly regretted by his congregation and numerous friends in Evansville. Who his successor will be is not yet known, as Mr. Webbe's resignation has not been expected except for a few weeks.

FEELS YOUNG AGAIN.

"My mother was afflicted a long time with Rheumatism and a very heavy, inactive condition of the whole system; headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physician or medicine did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she feels young again, although over 60 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."

The Fort Wayne Sentinel,

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 2, 1879.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Daily Sentinel—One Square—One Insertion, 50 cents; One Week, $1.75; One Month, $4.00; Three Months, $6.75; Six Months, $12.00; Twelve Months, $22.50.

Advertisements inserted every other day, twice a week, or once a week, will be charged respectively three-fifths, one-half, and one-third full-time rates.

Advertisements in Weekly Sentinel, one-third the price of Daily for an equal period of time.

Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York, one of the largest advertising agencies in the United States, in a circular recently issued, say: "The newspapers most largely patronized by advertisers charge rates, for the insertion of advertisements, which seem to be based upon the idea, that one cent a line for each line of space, or 14 cents per inch for a short inch of space, in each thousand copies issued, is a fair price for advertising."

A "fair price" for an inch of space in the SENTINEL, for one year, on this basis, would be $187.52. The annual rate for one inch space in the DAILY SENTINEL is $22.50, or less than one-eighth of a cent a line for each thousand issued.

The average circulation of the Daily Sentinel is now upwards of 4,400, and of the Weekly 2,200. The Weekly circulates almost exclusively with farmers. In addition to 288 mail subscribers, and what are sold by news boys, the Daily Sentinel is regularly delivered to subscribers in this city and neighboring towns as follows: Fort Wayne, 2,768; Monroeville, 46; New Haven, 20; Hometown, 9; Pierceton, 49; Arcola, 24; Larwill, 36; Columbia City, 121; Coesse, 10; Bourbon, 53; Plymouth, 35; Warsaw, 128; Elletts Green, 5; Alwood, 9; Delphos, 50; Elida, 30; Van Wert, 141; Naples, 14; Middlepoint, 15; Conroy, 20; Geneva, 13; Decatur, 36; Huntington, 165; Lugo, 33; Antioch, 20; Peru, 160; Bluffton, 142; Hartford City, 52; Inwood, 19; Montpelier, 36; Roanoke, 30; Wabash, 80; Ossian, 35; Auburn, 69; Waterloo, 43; Pleasant Lake, 26. Total regular and mail subscribers, 4,356.

The field in which a newspaper circulates should be considered by advertisers in making contracts. The DAILY SENTINEL circulates in every railroad town within a radius of seventy-five miles of Fort Wayne. No such advertising medium has ever before been offered to Fort Wayne Merchants.

The SENTINEL will duplicate any advertising contract made with any newspaper in the United States, taking circulation as the basis of the charge for space, whether the paper is the New York Herald, Chicago Times, or the smallest country weekly.

A very low estimate of the cost of printing and distributing circulars, in very large quantities, is $1.25 per thousand. The DAILY SENTINEL prints and circulates, on an average, 4,400 papers per day, or 1,370,000 per year. A six inch advertisement in the DAILY SENTINEL, one year, costs the advertiser $135.00. The cost of printing and distributing the same number of circulars would be, at $1.25 per thousand, $1,700.00, or thirteen times the cost of advertising in the SENTINEL.

Some deluded individual at Waterloo, corresponding with the Fort Wayne SENTINEL of Tuesday, and who was either drunk or disorderly, says: "Waterloo, at the junction of the Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw and the Baltimore and Ohio railroads, is a lively little business town," etc. Rip Van Winkle said, upon being told that he had been dead twenty years, "If Rip Van Winkle is dead, and this is me what is here, then who the devil am I?" And so, in this case, we are forced to suspend the rules of the Sunday school long enough to remark: If Waterloo is located at the junction of the above-named roads, then where the devil is Auburn?

The Fort Wayne SENTINEL is publishing the life of one of the constables of that town.

[Augsburg Herald.]

The Fort Wayne SENTINEL has a $2,000 libel suit on its hands. The injured party is George E. Graham, a constable whom the SENTINEL accused of being drunk and arresting parties without authority. The managers of that journal do not seem to be much worried over the matter and are preparing to show up the official in a light that will justify all former charges.

[Warsaw Indianian.]

It is said that it is a "dirty bird that fouls its own nest." This remark applies with a force that is almost touching to behold, to the correspondent from this place to the Fort Wayne SENTINEL, in its issue of Tuesday. It may be that Warsaw has some citizens who are unworthy, but in this particular it is no worse than other towns of its size, if indeed it is as bad; but the undoubted right of an American citizen has never yet been abridged, and those who do not like the place are not compelled to remain, and they had better get out of the town rather than hold its people up to invidious criticism.

That, at least, seems to be the feeling that prevails here just now.

[Elletts Green Democrat.]

The Fort Wayne SENTINEL has a $2,000 libel suit on hand. The SENTINEL seems to think it has the necessary proof to show the plaintiff up in grand style.

The Fort Wayne daily SENTINEL comes sometimes and sometimes it doesn't and its managers would confer a favor on its subscribers at this place by sending it regular. During the past week complaints have been frequent about its irregularity. Stir up boys and attend to this matter and you will gather a large list at this point.

While at Fort Wayne the other day O. S. Applegate purchased two pairs of pants, but by some mysterious proceedings he possesses three. Ol thinks it was a splendid joke on the others.

Fort Wayne thought she had an abortion on her hands, but 'twas all a hoax.

[Lafayette Dispatch.]

The Kerr Murray protest has died a miserable death. Mr. Lund who furnished the bulk of the money which made up the cash payment of $10,000 has gone into business with the Atlas Works at Indianapolis.

The Editor of the Columbia City Commercial.

To the Editor of the Columbia City Commercial:

We have been, and still are, considerably bulldozed by the Great I Am of this township. Contrary to the wishes of the majority of this township, he, the Great I Am, has caused to be built, a room in our new school house for a township room, thereby entirely ignoring the wishes of the taxpayers, after having faithfully promised that no such room should be put therein, said room occupying one-fourth of the space needed for the scholars. The ground on which the school house stands, was decided by Mr. J. Root, for school purposes only. The township does not own one foot of it. Then by what authority does the Great I Am dare to put in a township room? It appears to us that he is not master of his situation, but is led by the nose by one or two who imagine themselves running Whitley county, but this district is getting tired of being bulldozed, and it is probable that something will be done in the event of this school house being accepted by the Great I Am. At the last school meeting we elected a director, and the Great I Am substituted another; the teacher we elected for the upper school, he, the Great I Am, would not give the rate of wages, and hired another. We will not be so ungentlemanly as to say that the Great I Am of this township lied to us, but we will say he did not keep his promise. There is money both in and out of this district to bring him to time, and it will be done. Yours respectfully,

A Tragedian's Sore Throat.

Edwin Booth, like most of his professional brethren, suffers frequently from severe inflammation of the throat, which prevents him occasionally from appearing on the stage. This theatrical sore throat is sometimes so serious that it actually drives an actor into private life. Booth, however, promptly stops the first symptom with Giles' Linctament Iodine Ammonia.

A GOOD SHOWING FOR INDIANA.

Comprehensive Summary of Her Resources and Prospects.

The Relation Between the Fair and Rights of Property and Person.

Judge Lowry, in the opening portion of his recent address as president of the Indiana State Bar Association, thus asked and answered in part the question:

"What is the need, utility and mission of the legal profession in Indiana and the benefit to be derived from organized association on the part of its members? Let us briefly and somewhat practically consider."

Indiana adopted her constitution as an organized state on the 20th of June 1816, and was admitted to the Union by act of congress on Dec. 11 of the same year. In 1810 she had a population of 24,020, and, according to the next succeeding census, in 1820, a population of 147,178. Assuming the same percentage of increase in population between 1820 and 1830 as there was between 1810 and 1820, she will have within her borders in 1830, 2,100,796 souls. She has an area of 33,399 square miles, or 21,637,700 acres. The assessed value of her real estate in 1873 was $629,930,057, and of personal property $215,829,082, making a total of $845,759,139. She is in the order of population the sixth state in magnitude in the American Union. Of the great coal field extending also into Illinois and Kentucky, over 6,000 square miles are within her limits, of which latter a large portion is composed of the valuable fossil or block coal, so valuable in metallurgy. She is still enriched with large tracts of forest timber, including hickory, ash, poplar and black walnut. Of her entire area there over 7,000,000 acres of land under cultivation, and 11,000,000 or 12,000,000 of acres, improved and divided into farms of an average of 112 acres each. The value of her farm, forest and market-garden products, in 1870, including stock, living and slaughtered, and improvements, was $159,182,500, and of manufactured products, $108,617,278, making a total of $267,799,778. In 1880, it is probably safe to say the census will show an increase of at least one-fourth, thus making a total annual production of $394,712,282. There are in the state some 30 cities, varying in population from 8,000 to 90,000. In these and some of the towns are located 94 national and 150 private banks, the former having a circulation of $15,000,000, and the latter a capital of $6,000,000, and deposits of $10,000,000. Of the 65,757 miles of telegraph lines in the United States in 1878, Indiana had 6,943, or, in round numbers, 7,000; in 1877 there were 94,714 miles in the United States; and, now that there are in all probably 100,000 miles in the United States, it is fair to assume that this increase of lines gives Indiana now about 10,000 miles. She has 150 or more foreign insurance companies doing business with her citizens, which, excluding domestic companies, have a premium collection of, in round numbers, a million and a quarter of dollars, and schedule about three-quarters of a million of losses annually. She had, in the incipency of her commercial traffic, splendid, though now extinct, lines of canals, one of which connected the great chain of northern lakes and the river and Gulf of St. Lawrence with the great "Father of Waters" and the Gulf of Mexico, and was the longest in existence. She still has the fine navigable waters of the Ohio extending along her entire southern boundary. Her geographical position is such as renders it necessary for nearly the whole of the traffic and intercommunication between the manufacturing regions of the east, with the great mineral and agricultural regions west of her territory to pass over it, and her magnificent lines of railway now measure within a fraction of 4,000 miles; and traverse, with the exception of three or four, every county in the state. These instrumentalities combined, amongst other causes, with the fertility of her soil and the energy and industry of her people, have contributed to the building up of a vast trade between our own citizens, and between them and those of other states, rivaling in its character and extent many of the busiest of her sister commonwealths, and surpassing many a community elsewhere venerable for its centuries of growth, emulated for the successful development of its industrial resources, and reverenced for the morality of its commercial ethics. As a corollary of all this, it is to be expected that, in addition to the immense number of persons in the state engaged in agriculture, —being at this time about 200,000; in mining, manufacturing and mechanical pursuits, about 100,000; in trade and commerce, about 50,000; as laborers, about 50,000; as domestic servants, about 30,000;—there will be found in such a community, as a necessary and indispensable part of it, those devoted to other pursuits than the actual manipulation of matter or of the actual physical production of commodities and the increase of values. We have, hence, a body of so-called professional men, notably clergymen, educators, physicians and surgeons, and last, but not least, lawyers. Their numbers in the state in 1870, being the period of the last authentic data, were: Of clergymen 1,787, of teachers 6,618, of physicians and surgeons 3,613, and of lawyers 1,685, which latter has now probably increased to 2,500 or 3,000. Very many worthy people feel fully persuaded that this latter class, and possibly all courts, might be very profitably to the public, and to their own great comfort entirely dispensed with. [Laughter.] So with the ancient and ingenious, if not ingenious beldame. She thought the world would have been made happier for all if there had been no men in it. [Laughter.] But all history and experience teach otherwise. The question is not one open to discussion. The vast and diversified interests of a people possessed of all the magnificent, rapidly developed resources and envied by all the wonderful surroundings I have enumerated, must have guarantees of protection from the aggressions of others and of each other, and rights of person and of reputation must be held sacred and inviolable against the evil passions of the heedless and depraved, and the ruthless, ruffian band of violence. How shall this be accomplished but by availing ourselves of the instrumentalities which the combined experience of the past has pointed out? That experience has been placed in the crucible, and from it has been extracted and eliminated a multitude of principles, deemed by the most illustrious of mankind fitted for the guidance and government of the members of organized society. Their proper application requires the existence of tribunals. And when it is understood of what an infinite number of rules and their exceptions, a system woven together with a view to its being adapted to the infinitely diversified, ever-changing and kaleidoscopic aspects of human affairs is necessarily composed, it will be understood, also, how necessary it is to have those fitted by their learning and familiarized by their industry with the facts in each particular case, so as to aid the tribunals in applying to each peculiar combination of circumstances the appropriate deduction from the teachings of experience formulated into what is called a rule of law or equity, and thus work out the great end to be kept always in view, the unerring enforcement of even-handed justice. You have assembled here of those who sit in these tribunals and minister in their portals and at their altars. Your present mission is well summarized in the constitution of this body. It is "to promote mutual acquaintance and harmony," "to maintain a high standard of professional integrity, honor and courtesy; to encourage a thorough and liberal education; to give expression to the deliberate and well-considered opinion of the legal profession upon matters wherein its members may properly act as a body; to assist in the improvement of the laws and the better administration of justice to all classes." These will be admitted on all hands to be most laudable objects.

The president continued his address by giving a brief resume of the associations of the bar for kindred purposes in England, Scotland, France and other nations of Europe, and by enlarged comments on the excellencies and defects of the profession and the law, and concluded with an appeal for the still higher development and improvement of both.

Five months, within five days, have elapsed since he trod the streets of Port Wayne, except in charge of an officer.

His bond has been in course of preparation for several days, and after various delays Judge Jordan had the prisoner brought into court this morning at about 11 o'clock and there APPROVED THE BOND.

and discharged the prisoner. His bond was amply sufficient, the bail being fixed at $5,000, while the bondsmen represent over $150,000.

THE NAMES

Vogel, John Draker, W. A. Miller, H. J. Trentman, A. L. Baldwin, James Fox, Wm. Kaough, Fred Bickness, A. Mergenthimer, W. P. Swinney.

After being released Swayne accompanied his brother George to the residence of his brother-in-law, Dave Walters, on Columbia street, where he met his mother and sisters, and altogether they had

CANUCK ON CANAL.

Mr. Wynne, of St. Catharines, Ont., Talks About the Ditch Deepening Scheme.

Which Will Make Port Wayne the Great Central Point Between the Oceans.

Mr. Wynne, of St. Catharines, Ont., is in the city working up the scheme for deepening the canal.

Mr. Wynne is in the employment of the Wabash and Erie Canal Enlargement Company, and during the last six weeks has addressed twenty-four meetings in regard to the subject. He circulates petitions at every meeting and explains the working of the scheme to all interested. Mr. Wynne's plan, as explained by himself, is to deepen the canal so as to avoid the necessity of locks. There are sixteen miles of the canal, the bed of which is ten feet higher than the rest, making two locks necessary. He would deepen this sixteen miles to a level with the rest of the canal, and thus secure a long stretch of canal without locks, and at the same time improve the adjacent country by reclaiming the lands. The improvement to be made would be largely in Allen and Huntington counties, and he thinks these counties would receive great benefit therefrom.

The following is a copy of the petition which Mr. Wynne is circulating: To the Congress of the United States: Whereas, a great public necessity exists to create a water navigation that shall connect the navigable rivers of the great west with the great lakes; and as there is only a distance of two hundred miles between the navigable rivers of the west and Lake Erie, and the bed of a canal now exists which can be widened and deepened at a small expense; and Whereas, the government has considered this connection by canal a great public necessity as early as 1827, and in pursuance thereof granted to Indiana large bounties of land and the right of way for the bed of a canal, which was constructed and conducted successfully for many years, but which has latterly been permitted to fall into disuse and decay; and Whereas, the maintenance of said canal cannot and is not done by the said state of Indiana.

We, the undersigned, citizens of the state of Indiana, hereby respectfully pray the government of the United States, through congress, to construct and maintain a ship canal down the Wabash valley, in the bed of the old Wabash and Erie Canal, to the head of navigation on the Wabash River.

JESSE LEHR.

He Didn't Write That Attack on the Police; in Fact He Can't Write, or Read.

Some time since a communication appeared in the SENTINEL reflecting on the police force of the city. The peeler were very indignant, and laid the matter before the grand jury, inasmuch as the editor of the SENTINEL declined to furnish them with the name of the author. The grand jury found no indictment.

The communication was brought to the SENTINEL office by Jesse Lehr, the well known merchant, puliceman, and was signed with his name. Mr. Lehr requests the SENTINEL to state that he did not write it, and did not know its contents in proof of which he says that he cannot read, and is unable to write even his own name. He says the letter was handed him on the street one night by an individual whom he knows by sight but not by name, and who requested him to hand it to the editor of the SENTINEL.

Geo. W. Pepper at the Academy to-night.

YANKED IN.

Sorry Creatures Who Fell Into the Hands of the Peelers.

And Were Forwarded Over the Rhine by His Honor.

The mayor stood it like a hero, although the odor which emanated from the calaboose refugees as they entered the city hall this morning would have made many a stout heart quail. As it was, it knocked two but tons off the marshal's coat and cracked the plastering on the wall.

Conrad Lauer was there. Conrad had been on a little tear yesterday, and last night, from some unexplained reason, he found himself in the calaboose, and this morning from the same strange fatality and combination of circumstances, he walked over to jail to stay there $10 worth.

John Morgan, Amos Melton and Johnson Nicholson all sailed in the same barge, and that barge finally went into the dry dock, not in Davy Jones' locker, but in Capt. Smith's lock-up. $3 was all the mayor could find room to say and they too could say no more.

Fannie Myers, Charles Williams and William Randolph were naughty. That at any rate is the general supposition. They put up $10 for their appearance, but didn't appear, and now the Home for the Friendless is that much ahead.

SCHIEFER'S SHOE STORE.

A Columbia Street House That Controls the Boot and Shoe "Boom."

The ubiquitous SENTINEL man in his rounds this morning ran against the huge alligator which adorns the sidewalk in front of Schiefer & Son's Boot and Shoe Store on Columbia street.

After the S. m. had recovered his equilibrium he scripped up courage enough to enter the store, and here he was knocked clean "off his base" by the immense array of Boots and Shoes which surrounded him on every side. Rubber Boots, Overshoes, and everything in the shoe line that can be imagined.

Schiefer & Son are genial folks, and spare no efforts to please their customers. Our citizens should call and examine their beautiful stock. No. 8 East Columbia street.

LECTURE.

George W. Pepper.

This celebrated and eloquent orator will lecture at the Academy to-night, and should be greeted with a large audience. The Jersey City Journal says: "George W. Pepper, the lecturer, showed that he had studied his subject closely, and made many points that were new. It was characterized by force and sparkle of language, and a fiery and impassioned style of rhetoric."

A FREE MAN.

Jack Swayne Released from Jail at Last.

Rejoicings by Himself, His Family and His Friends.

Jack Swayne is free, at least for a time under certain restrictions. The terms of his bond require him to be in readiness for trial at the criminal court from day to day during its session.

Five months, within five days, have elapsed since he trod the streets of Fort Wayne, except in charge of an officer.

His bond has been in course of preparation for several days, and after various delays Judge Borden had the prisoner brought into court this morning at about 11 o'clock and there and discharged the prisoner.

His bond was amply sufficient, the bail being fixed at $5,000, while the bondsmen represent over $150,000.

Following are

of the signers to the bond, being eighteen in all:

W. H. Brown, W. F. C. Bonter, Wm. Smith, B. H. Trentman, C. W. Lintlag, John H. Brannan, Jackson Swayne, Charlotte Swayne, F. B. Vogel, John Draker, W. A. Miller, H. J. Trentman, A. L. Baldwin, James Fox, Wm. Kaough, Fred Bickness, A. Mercenthine, W. P. Swinney.

After being released Swayne accompanied his brother George to the residence of his brother-in-law, Dave Walters, on Columbia street, where he met his mother and sisters, and altogether they had he taking his first dinner after his release at the same place where he took his last dinner prior to his arrest. After dinner he went around town to meet his many friends and receive their congratulations. This evening a supper will be tendered him and his friends at the residence of his mother, on Douglass avenue.

CANUCK ON CANAL.

Mr. Wynne, of St. Catharines, Ont., Talks About the Ditch Deepening Scheme.

Which Will Make Fort Wayne the Great Central Point Between the Oceans.

Mr. Wynne, of St. Catharines, Ont., is in the city working up the scheme for deepening the canal.

Mr. Wynne is in the employment of the Wabash and Erie Canal Enlargement Company, and during the last six weeks has addressed twenty-four meetings in regard to the subject. He circulates petitions at every meeting and explains the working of the scheme to all interested. Mr. Wynne's plan, as explained by himself, is to deepen the canal so as to avoid the necessity of locks. There are sixteen miles of the canal, the bed of which is ten feet higher than the rest, making two locks necessary.

By deepening the canal to a level with the rest of the canal, and thus secure a long stretch of canal without locks, and at the same time improve the adjacent country by reclaiming the lands. The improvement to be made would be largely in Allen and Huntington counties, and he thinks these counties would receive great benefit therefrom.

The following is a copy of the petition which Mr. Wynne is circulating: To the Congress of the United States:

Whereas, a great public necessity exists to create a water navigation that shall connect the navigable rivers of the great west with the great lakes; and as there is only a distance of two hundred miles between the navigable rivers of the west and Lake Erie, and the bed of a canal now exists which can be widened and deepened at a small expense; and

Whereas, the government has considered this connection as early as 1827, and in pursuance thereof granted to Indiana large bodies of land and the right of way for the bed of a canal, which was constructed and conducted successfully for many years, but which has lately been permitted to fall into disuse and decay; and

Whereas, the maintenance of said canal cannot and is not done by the said state of Indiana.

We, the undersigned, citizens of the state of Indiana, hereby respectfully pray the government of the United States, through congress, to construct and maintain a ship canal down the Wabash valley, in the bed of the old Wabash and Erie canal, to the head of navigation on the Wabash River.

JESSE LEHR.

He Didn't Write That Attack on the Police; In Fact He Can't Write, or Read.

Some time since a communication appeared in the SENTINEL reflecting on the police force of the city. The peepers were very indignant, and laid the matter before the grand jury, inasmuch as the editor of the SENTINEL declined to furnish them with the name of the author. The grand jury found no indictment.

The communication was brought to the SENTINEL office by Jesse Lehr, the well known merchant policeman, and was signed with his name. Mr. Lehr requests the SENTINEL to state that he did not write it, and did not know its contents in proof of which he says that he cannot read, and is unable to write even his own name. He says the letter was handed him on the street one night by an individual whom he knows by sight but not by name, and who requested him to hand it to the editor of the SENTINEL.

YANKED IN.

Sorry Creatures Who Fall Into the Hands of the Peelers.

And Were Forwarded Over the Rhine by His Honor.

The mayor stood it like a hero, although the odor which emanated from the calaboose refugees as they entered the city hall this morning would have made many a stout heart quail. As it was, it knocked two but tons off the marshal's coat and cracked the plastering on the wall.

Conrad Lauer was there. Conrad had been on a little tear yesterday, and last night, from some unexplained reason, he found himself in the calaboose, and this morning from the same strange fatality and combination of circumstances, he walked over to jail to stay there $10 worth.

John Morgan, Amos Melton and Johnson Nicholson all sailed in the same barge, and that barge finally went into the dry dock, not in Davy Jones' locker, but in Capt. Smith's lock-up. $3 was all the mayor could find to say and they too could say no more.

Fannie Myers, Charles Williams and William Randolph were naughty. That at any rate is the general supposition. They put up $10 for their appearance, but didn't appear, and now the Home for the Friendless is that much ahead.

SCHIEFER'S SHOE STORE.

A Columbia Street House That Controls the Foot and Shoe "Boom."

The ubiquitous SENTINEL man in his rounds this morning ran against the huge alligator which adorns the sidewalk in front of Schiefer & Son's Boot and Shoe Store on Columbia street.

After the S. m. had recovered his equilibrium he scraped up courage enough to enter the store, and here he was knocked clean "off his base" by the immense array of Boots and Shoes which surrounded him on every side. Rubber Boots, Overshoes, and everything in the shoe line that can be imagined.

Schiefer & Son are genial folks, and spare no efforts to please their customers. Our citizens should call and examine their beautiful stock. No. 8 East Columbia street.
